Examples of Issues:

A national chain of career colleges appoints a corporate nursing director to develop nursing program curriculum and policies and to oversee all nursing programs across multiple campuses in multiple states. The local campus is independently accredited. The national chain hires and identifies a local campus nursing administrator as administrator of the nursing program in their application. The organizational chart reveals that the local site administrator of the nursing program is reporting directly to a campus director but also is reporting to the corporate director of nursing. Policies reveal that most administrative aspects of the program are determined by a corporate nursing director.

Current interpretation: The program is advised that whoever they appoint as administrator must have administrative control over the program and the ability to modify curriculum, admission standards etc. There can be a relationship with the corporate nursing director for advice or consultation. Additionally the parent institution can set policies for curriculum change such as advisory committees and peer review as commonly occurs in most program, but the administrator is the person responsible for the program and must have a mechanism to institute and effect change to meet the unique needs of the particular program in AZ.

1. The administrator of a school with a small program calls and asks if the nursing program administrator can be part time.
   Rules were amended effective 7/6/2013 to prohibit a part-time nursing program administrator.

2. A rural program requires the nursing program administrator to teach 45 hours during the school year however a site visit revealed that the administrator was teaching over 45 hours and was also administering the CNA program and did not have sufficient time or assistance to tend to her administrative duties. She wanted to use her “own time” on weekends to teach for the program.
   Current interpretation: This is not permitted. Rules effective 7/6/13 also require that the administrator have assistance from a qualified faculty member when administering multiple programs.

3. A nursing program, upon the resignation of the nursing program administrator, appoints 2 faculty members to perform administrative duties while maintaining their teaching loads.
   Current interpretation: Programs can have only one administrator and that administrator must meet all requirements and work in a full-time position. An interim administrator’s job description and qualifications must meet the rule requirements for nursing program administrators including limited teaching.

4. Another variant of the above: a program reorganizes the nursing department and leaves the current administrator in place, however promotes another nursing faculty to oversee him/her and approve all program decisions—this is not an academic officer of the institution. The program identifies the current administrator as the program administrator.
   Current interpretation: This does not meet rule requirements as the administrator must answer to an academic officer of the institution and have authority over all aspects of the program.

5. A large program has an overall program administrator and several site coordinators. Do the current rules prevent the site coordinators from teaching more than 45 hours in one academic session?
   Current interpretation: No, rule only applies to designated administrator for the total program.
